Vaccine Confidence: A Call to Action to Create Change in Communities of Color

Returning to normalcy is our priority! By participating in this study and providing your feedback, you will receive $50. Empower, connect, engage, and advocate to create change for your community!

If you are a Black/African American woman or man aged 18 and older and living in North Carolina, we want to hear from you. Please join an important study on community concerns and/or acceptance and beliefs about vaccines and immunizations.

Who can participate?
• Black/African American women or men aged 18 and older.
• Live in North Carolina.
• Access to a stable internet connection and Zoom.
• Able to understand and speak English, or communicate using American Sign Language (ASL).

Participation will be limited to 130 people.

What is required?
Study registration and commitment to attend and participate in a two-hour activity. Participants who complete all activities will be compensated.

Who is running the study?
A team, led by Joan Packenham, Ph.D., at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences in Research Triangle Park, North Carolina.
